

Pharad's Wearable Antennas Featured in October 2011 Microwave Journal

Pharad, LLC's wearable antenna products were featured in the Microwave Journal's cover story, "The Spy Who Loved Microwaves," in their October 2011 issue.

The company's body wearable antennas were one of a handful of highlighted products that were considered products "James Bond would be proud to use." The Journal's staff noted that wearable technology enables "personal area networks," taking the art of covert operations to the next level.

Pharad leads the industry in comprehensive commercial-off-the-shelf wearable antenna products supporting communications, telematics, and intelligence services. The unique form factor of Pharad's wearable antennas is made possible by incorporating Pharad's patented Flexenna® flexible antenna technology.